TEXT: Education and Democracy

It may be appropriate to begin this section with a review of the findings on the relationship between education and democracy. It can be shown, for example, that the higher the education level of a country, the more likely is it to be a democracy. Within countries, moreover, there is an even stronger relationship between education and democratic attitudes. In a summary of the main research findings Lipset argues that "data gathered by public opinion research agencies which have questioned people in different countries about their beliefs on tolerance for the opposition and their attitude toward ethnic or racial minorities, have showed that the most important single factor differentiating those given democratic responses from the others has been education. The higher one's education, the more likely one is to believe in democratic values and support democratic practices. All the relevant studies indicate that education is more significant than either income or occupation." Particularly impressive in this connection is Lipset's evidence that the working classes, and the less- educated, tend to be more authoritarian in their attitudes, and to be more likely to favour extremist political and religious groups. There is also some, although by no means conclusive, evidence that students at college become more liberal "in the sense of being more sophisticated and independent in their thinking, and placing greater value upon individual freedom and well-being."

Text: The drought

West African countries have often been affected by drought. When this drought lasts several years - as it is the case this time- it is a national disaster for each of these countries. The livestock - that is often, to the south of the Sahara, the basis of the economic life - begins to die of hunger and thirst. Harvests do not grow anymore and when there is not anything to eat people begin to die... Let us wish that international help and cooperation will one day replace violence and war!

GOOD LUCK!!!

CONCOURS D'ENTREE A L'EAMAC SESSION 2010

EPREUVE D'ANGLAIS POUR LE NIVEAU D.U.E.S.

TOPIC N°2

1. READING COMPREHENSION

"It is our duty to erase the negative perceptions and to highlight the positive elements of migration," said Sir John Kaputin, ACP Secretary General. The ACP Group Brussels Resolution on Migration and development adopted at the meeting will be presented to the incoming Global Forum on Migration, in Manila, the Philippines, in October 2008. It calls for more research into why people move, including the connection with climate change and to urgently halt the dumping of toxic waste in ACP waters- a practice which induces migration. Improved management of asylum, migration and mobility by ACP governments is another recommendation.

The commissioning by the ACP's Secretariat of a study by 2009 on best practices for the promotion of the integration of migrants in host countries is requested. Innovative solutions to illegal migration to arrest the brain drain of skilled workers from ACP countries are also called for.

Circular migration- allowing greater flexibility of workers to enter overseas job markets and return to his or her country of origin with greater ease- should be taken forward, said ACP Ministers. The resolution also says governments should tackle the issue of migrants working without documentation and that ACP nations should ratify legal frame works to tackle human smuggling.

Responding to journalists' questions on the recent violence in South Africa directed at Zimbabwean migrants, Senator Elma Campbell, Minister of State for the Immigration of the Bahamas, who chaired the Brussels meeting said: "we urge ACP states to implement legislation to combat racism and xenophobia and increase awareness of the phenomena.”
